THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

The System Works Badly

Washington, March 7.—THE consistent ability of organized minorities to render impotent the great majority of our citizens in an acute national crisis is perhaps the weakest thing about the American system. Unable to function intelligently themselves, it makes slightly absurd insistence upon other nations adopting our methods.

FIRST requisite to the world leadership which we have assumed would seem to be the reasonably effective working of our own governmental machinery at home. Few will claim that it is working well. On the contrary, there is abundant evidence that it has dangerously bogged down. Clearly, it cannot work until some method is found by which these great industrial-labor conflicts can be settled without strikes which economically strangle the country and involve inconvenience, hardship and actual peril to the people as a whole.

AND, just as clearly, that way has not been found. For nearly four months now, at a time when full production is more vital than any other peacetime period in our history, a series of strikes in basic industries essential to the national life, has made idle more than a million men, cost many hundreds of millions in lost wages and lost orders, paralyzed production and alarmingly enhanced the threat of a disastrous inflation.

THOUGH it has had before it for longer than four months legislation designed to provide peaceful ways of dealing with this situation; though the need has grown with every week, and though the sentiment of the great majority favors action, Congress has failed to act. The reason, of course, is politics—politics upon the part of an Administration which for twelve years has had a degrading political alliance with labor-union leaders, and politics upon the part of senators and representatives cowed into support or inertia by threats from the political agencies of the unions or themselves inherently pro-union and anti-industry.

AND now, an even graver threat looms. Mr. John L. Lewis has given notice of the intention of his United Mine Workers to strike in 30 days unless their demands are met. Regardless of the merits of these demands, a strike in this industry upon which so much of the economic life of the country depends, will be a crippling affair, complete calamity being averted in the end, as before, only by the Government taking over the mines. Thus, on top of these months of costly strikes, Congress is now given a month's notice of a coal strike which easily may be the most costly of all. It would seem that now it must act; that now it can stall no longer; that now it must respond to the known wish of the great majority which wants—and is entitled to—protection. But there is no sign that it will do these things. Actually, there is sound reason to think it will not do them.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All in The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Salem Reformed Church at Doylestown was host to more than 200 service men and women, their wives or sweethearts, and friends at a church supper held in the assembly hall of the church at the county seat Monday evening.

With the pastor, the Rev. Charles F. Freeman, D. D., and Mrs. Freeman as hosts, the former armed forces service men and women were enthusiastically welcomed as they assembled prior to the dinner.

Seated at tables of six, Dr. Freeman, who served as an excellent commanding officer, saw to it that one member of the congregation served as either the "Mon" or the "Pop," turning it into a veritable family dinner.

Earl S. Templeton, aged 59, a well-known resident of New Hope, died suddenly Monday evening of a ruptured artery near the heart while working in the plant of the Union Paper Mills Company, at New Hope.

A papermaker by trade, Mr. Templeton succumbed about five minutes after he was stricken.

Coroner J. Alfred Rigby, Cornwall Heights, who was called, issued a certificate of death by natural causes.

A son of Laura Templeton and the late Charles Templeton, the deceased spent the greater part of his life in New Hope and was employed in the mills there 24 years.

He was one of the organizers and charter members of the New Hope Fish, Game and Forestry Protective Association.

In addition to his widow, Adelaide (nee Knowles) Templeton, the deceased is survived by his mother, New Hope; three daughters, Mrs. Marion Hayden, Pitman, N. J.; Miss Elizabeth Templeton, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Alma Stover, Pennington, N. J.; a brother, Roscoe Templeton, Lambertville, N. J.; and three grandchildren.

Sellersville borough council's meeting Monday evening, was devoted largely to the transaction of routine business.

Preliminary plans were made for the construction of a storage building in the spring. This will be used to house the borough owned implements and machinery.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The Detroit City Council asked President Truman to intervene personally in the General Motors dispute. Union leaders declared there was no hope of settlement and President Thomas accused the NLRB of having joined with the company to smash the union.

The President, addressing the Federal Council of Churches in Columbus, Ohio, said that only a moral and spiritual awakening could save the world from disaster and that the UNO was built on the solid rock of religious principles. He asked support for his reconversion program and plans to help feed the starving world. Part of Hunter College in the Bronx was leased to the UNO from March 1 to May 15 at $9,333.34 a month.

Administration leaders were concerned over the growing strength of the House Republican-Democratic coalition that has fought much of the Roosevelt-Truman program, not without success. After seven days' consideration it succeeded in stripping most of the protective features from the housing bill designed to build 2,700,000 homes and help veterans.

While Ambassador Halifax conferred with Secretary Byrnes on world famine conditions the capital rang with attacks on price controls, demands for continuation of sub-

Walkout Cancelled on Basis of Wage Agreement Between AT&T and FLLW

By Phillips J. Peck

(U. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 7.—(INS)—The threatened national telephone strike was called off today just 25 minutes before the 6 a. m. starting deadline for the paralyzing communications tieup.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, sent out orders at 5:35 a. m. EST to 250,000 workers in 51 affiliated unions throughout the nation to stay on the job.

The action came after a two-day government peace parley climaxed by an all night session attended by union-management representatives and key labor department officials.

The NFW cancelled the walkout on the basis of a wage agreement between the AT&T and the Federation of Long Line Workers providing a pay boost ranging from five to eight dollars a week for 19,300 long distance employees.

The NFW accepted the settlement as the "pattern" for adjusting other wage controversies involving AT&T subsidiaries, including the Western Electric Company and the nationwide Bell Telephone systems.

Firm Management States No
Notice Received of Acceptance of Terms

CIO SESSION TONIGHT

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Mar. 7.—Contrary to reports that have been circulated and that have appeared in the metropolitan press, the strike of employees of Badenhause Corporation, here, has not come to a conclusion. This announcement is made today by Elmer B. VanSant, manager of the firm.

VanSant states that no official notification has been received by the Badenhause Corp. from the union (CIO) that the terms offered by the firm have been accepted.

A meeting of plant officials and union representatives took place on Tuesday afternoon. At that time, it is stated by VanSant, the corporation offered 15 1/2¢ an-hour increase for all employees covered by the union agreement, the increase to apply immediately upon return of the employees to their jobs.

No word has been received by the firm from the union, it is stated.

It is stated by VanSant that he has been informed a meeting of union membership will be held this evening for the purpose of ratification or rejection of the firm's offer. The firm management will await official word from union representatives at the conclusion of that meeting, Mr. VanSant advises.

Re-Enlists As He Finds Civilian Life "Rough"

Roy C. Hopkins and wife Alice, formerly of San Francisco, Cal., decided to make Bristol their home when Hopkins was released from service in October last year but, according to him, civilian life was too rough. He has re-enlisted for the recruiting service, and is now stationed in the post office in Burlington, N. J.

Hopkins, a veteran of Guadalcanal, and who spent four years in the Philippine Islands prior to Dec. 7th states that he believes the army of today offers more than private enterprise, especially to the young man just graduating from high school. "For a three enlistment a young man can get four years of college or business, professional or trade school, plus the other advantages of the G. I. Bill of Rights such as farm loans, business loans, job finding assistance, etc. With most colleges and universities full of veterans, and not accepting applications from any but veterans, and also with veterans having priority on jobs," Hopkins states "an enlistment of 18 months, two years or three years would be the best thing for the young man graduating from high school this year."

TO CHANGE BUS ROUTE

Effective Monday, March 11, all buses of the Burlington-Bristol line will traverse Pond street instead of Radcliffe street, it is announced.

If you want to keep it a secret, don't put it in the Want Ads.

The "One-Foot Hop"

(By "The Strollers")

Philadelphians were treated to a new "dance" last evening by a young woman resident of Bristol Township. The "stage" was a Philadelphia subway train and platform.

It all happened as the fair one from Bucks, accompanied by a group of friends en route home from a concert attempted to board a subway train. She lost a slipper and it went down and down to the road-bed. Hoping about on one foot, and all the time exclaiming about not wishing to dirty the nylons she had borrowed from her mother, the young woman "made" the platform in one of the hops.

The station attendant was summoned, the slipper retrieved, the nylons kept immaculate, and the homeward journey resumed on the next train.

MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY

No more amazing speech has ever been delivered than that of Winston Churchill at Fulton, Mo.

Boldly he proposed the military and economic alliance of two of the world's three major powers, England and the United States.

The purpose, only thinly veiled by his language, would be that of "heading off" Russia, whom he most clearly visualized as now grown too great to be dealt with either by England or the United States alone.

There can be no dispute that what he proposes is a fusion of all the English-speaking part of the world into a single military and economic force. He stressed the military cooperation, and told most plainly what he believed would be its moral effect upon Russia at two points in his address.

The first was in these words:

"From what I have seen of our Russian friends and allies during the war, I am convinced that there is nothing they admire so much as strength, and there is nothing for which they have less respect than for military weakness."

It can hardly be denied that, under his own phrases, the proposed fusion of Anglo-American armed resources would be an anti-Russian bloc.

The second point at which he made painfully clear that what he is suggesting is a military alliance aimed directly at curbing and intimidating Russia was in his discussions of the atomic bomb.

In the most vigorous language, he demands that the United States, Great Britain and Canada continue to guard this weapon from the Russian efforts to spy it out; and, after mentioning the peace of mind of the world because it was in Anglo-American hands, continued:

BUILDING CODE REVISION

Alfred Schlinder, Undersecretary of the Department of Commerce, may have started something when he said in Washington: "We want to crack the building codes, the feather-bedding by labor, and the restrictive building practices which add 3 per cent to the cost of every house and waste precious building time." He added that there never has been a concerted attack by a governmental department "on a problem like this, and we're resolved to see it through."

This is brave talk, and timely. But the federal government lacks the authority to establish building codes in every community. Construction of dwellings is not something that enters into interstate commerce, thus the problem becomes one for each community to solve. The Department of Commerce is in a position to propose a model code, written in the interest of everybody concerned, but it can not compel any city to adopt it.

The Washington announcement does invite attention to building codes in effect in cities and towns. A re-examination of the state building code also may be necessary. The demand now is for new housing, constructed with the utmost dispatch, at no greater cost than is fair, and with the elimination of restrictions that have nothing to do with satisfactory building methods.

Labor will defeat its own interests if it insists on regulations that were written into codes when work was slack and the theory of the code makers was to favor the crafts concerned. Obviously there should be safeguards in every code, but the vital need now is for action. Elimination of needless restrictions from all building codes means more jobs at good wages. That would benefit labor rather than hamper its well being.

SAVING THE REDWOODS

The D. A. R. and local California organizations are continuing their campaign for the preservation of the native redwood trees. The territory covered by these trees is immense and the project to save them involves the building of roads through the forests for motorists, whose increasing numbers magnify the work of the societies that are interested.

The main road through the redwoods now is a two-lane driveway, necessarily circuitous in order to avoid the trees that would have to be removed to provide a straight route through the woods. A four-lane way has now been proposed and responsible people who are back of the enterprise are considering whether this ought to be done, or whether some alternative may be devised to save the trees that would have to be sacrificed if the width of the roadway were increased.

Perhaps two one-way roads might be the solution. But, at any rate, the forests should be preserved.

Billboards that flash colored pictures are to appear on the Pacific Coast. But they will have reached their ultimate development when live models lighting cigarettes are superimposed on them.

"I do not believe we should all have slept so soundly had the positions been reversed and some Communist or neo-Fascist State monopolized, for the time being, these dread agencies."

His is a proposal, in the last analysis, of the most staggering importance. If successful, it might avert a third World War; on the assumption that Churchill's reasoning is correct and that Russia would "respect" the military might of the Anglo-American fusion.

But if it were tried and failed, a third World War would be inevitable—and of course a war on a scale and intensity which might wreck civilization.

The fact that the address was delivered under the personal auspices of the President of the United States gives the Churchill recommendations the greatest of weight.

If the President disagreed, he took no occasion to say so.

And from whom does this amazing proposal come? From a "man without a country."

The only nation for which Churchill could be said to be speaking is, of course, England—and Great Britain has repudiated the Churchill thinking by a vote of two to one.

The present British government was elected on two broad propositions, both of them opposed by Churchill. One is that England should "cooperate" with Russia, and the other that the British people were to tear down the type of government Churchill believes in and rebuild their economy along lines closely imitating those of Communist Russia.

There probably is no parallel in history for a leader repudiated in his own land, one of the great powers of the earth, attempting to commit that country to sweeping changes in policy; and doing so under the personal sponsorship of the ruler of another great power.

Churchill himself realized quite clearly the implications of the situation. Said he:

"Let me make it clear that I have no official mission or status of any kind and that I speak only for myself."

There will be those who will feel that Churchill was merely playing some adroit political game, seeking to get back into power in England. They will not accept his disclaimer that all his ambitions already have been "satisfied beyond my wildest dreams."

It is doubtful, however, that Churchill was playing any such game.

He knows, of course, that he is bluntly demanding that England step down from the high position expressed in the phrase, "Britannia Rules the Waves," and become junior partner in a fusion in which Uncle Sam would dominate. And he knows, too, that to a host of fellow Britishers such a proposal will come as first cousin to an insult.

Far from elevating him in the hearts of his countrymen, the speech may forever eliminate him from the possibility of resuming British leadership—even if his suggestions were to be carried out!

And Churchill, too, has been far too long in politics, and is too adroit in its workings, not to realize that this is probably the last time President Truman will be so rash as to venture on the same public platform with Churchill.

President Truman has been put on the toughest spot of his political life by the wily Britisher.

Is he for or against merging with Great Britain; is he for or against Russia? These are questions he will find exceedingly hard to answer, yet Churchill's speech, under such auspices, demands that he answer them.

The address was a bombshell for all the foreign and much of the domestic policy to which Truman has committed himself.

FOR INSTANCE, three corrective proposals appear indefinitely hung up in Senate committees. The Case bill, which is not drastic and not really comprehensive, but none the less in the right direction, was overwhelmingly passed by the House. It is now held in the Senate Education and Labor Committee which is pretty well stocked with CIO Senators. And the Hobbs anti-racketeering bill, twice passed by the House and designed only to make unions amenable to the same criminal laws which everyone else must obey, is held again in the pro-union Judiciary Committee. And the really comprehensive and fair Ball-Burton Hatch bill, which would help more than any so far proposed, has been in its Senate committee for nearly five months.

AND NOW, after a long period of inaction, it is announced that the Education and Labor Committee has appointed a sub-committee not to consider pending bills but to draft an altogether new bill. Even if the new bill should be an effective piece of legislation, it could not be drafted, debated and enacted inside of 60 days, much less the 30 given us by Mr. Lewis. But no one thinks the sub-committee will produce an effective bill, for the simple reason that it is packed with CIO Senators opposed to any legislation not favored by the CIO lobby.

THIS is an indefensible state of affairs. Yet, because of the inability to get the masses of the people sufficiently informed to become effectively indignant, nothing can be done about it and the country moves steadily closer to what seems to be economic chaos. How long the tolerance and inertia of the masses will permit the political adherents in public office of a single labor faction to imperil their happiness and prosperity is a question—maybe, indefinitely. At any rate, it is a situation that ought to make us ashamed to preach order, competency and economy to other nations and to press upon them the adoption of a system which we cannot make work ourselves. But we are doing both those things.

JOHNSTOWN — The West End Citizen's Club has been stymied in its drive to have "no smoking" signs in buses either enforced or removed, an appeal to city hall brought word that municipal officials have no authority over company property. The company reported that since the city had not passed an ordinance, the signs could not be removed.

BUILDING CODE REVISION

Alfred Schindler, Undersecretary of the Department of Commerce, may have started something when he said in Washington: "We want to crack the building codes, the feather-bedding by labor, and the restrictive building practices which add 3 per cent to the cost of every house and waste precious building time." He added that there never has been a concerted attack by a governmental department "on a problem like this, and we're resolved to see it through."

This is brave talk, and timely. But the federal government lacks the authority to establish building codes in every community. Construction of dwellings is not something that enters into interstate commerce, thus the problem becomes one for each community to solve. The Department of Commerce is in a position to propose a model code, written in the interest of everybody concerned, but it can not compel any city to adopt it.

The Washington announcement does invite attention to building codes in effect in cities and towns. A re-examination of the state building code also may be necessary. The demand now is for new housing, constructed with the utmost dispatch, at no greater cost than is fair, and with the elimination of restrictions that have nothing to do with satisfactory building methods.

Labor will defeat its own interests if it insists on regulations that were written into codes when work was slack and the theory of the code makers was to favor the crafts concerned. Obviously there should be safeguards in every code, but the vital need now is for action. Elimination of needless restrictions from all building codes means more jobs at good wages. That would benefit labor rather than hamper its well being.

SAVING THE REDWOODS

The D. A. R. and local California organizations are continuing their campaign for the preservation of the native redwood trees. The territory covered by these trees is immense and the project to save them involves the building of roads through the forests for motorists, whose increasing numbers magnify the work of the societies that are interested.

The main road through the redwoods now is a two-lane driveway, necessarily circuitous in order to avoid the trees that would have to be removed to provide a straight route through the woods. A four-lane way has now been proposed and responsible people who are back of the enterprise are considering whether this ought to be done, or whether some alternative may be devised to save the trees that would have to be sacrificed if the width of the roadway were increased.

Perhaps two one-way roads might be the solution. But, at any rate, the forests should be preserved.

Billboards that flash colored pictures are to appear on the Pacific Coast. But they will have reached their ultimate development when live models lighting cigarettes are superimposed on them.

"I do not believe we should all have slept so soundly had the positions been reversed and some Communist or neo-Fascist State monopolized, for the time being, these dread agencies."

His is a proposal, in the last analysis, of the most staggering importance. If successful, it might avert a third World War; on the assumption that Churchill's reasoning is correct and that Russia would "respect" the military might of the Anglo-American fusion.

But if it were tried and failed, a third World War would be inevitable—and of course a war on a scale and intensity which might wreck civilization.

The fact that the address was delivered under the personal auspices of the President of the United States gives the Churchill recommendations the greatest of weight.

If the President disagreed, he took no occasion to say so.

And from whom does this amazing proposal come? From a "man without a country."

The only nation for which Churchill could be said to be speaking is, of course, England—and Great Britain has repudiated the Churchill thinking by a vote of two to one.

The present British government was elected on two broad propositions, both of them opposed by Churchill. One is that England should "cooperate" with Russia, and the other that the British people were to tear down the type of government Churchill believes in and rebuild their economy along lines closely imitating those of Communist Russia.

There probably is no parallel in history for a leader repudiated in his own land, one of the great powers of the earth, attempting to commit that country to sweeping changes in policy; and doing so under the personal sponsorship of the ruler of another great power.

Churchill himself realized quite clearly the implications of the situation. Said he:

"Let me make it clear that I have no official mission or status of any kind and that I speak only for myself."

There will be those who will feel that Churchill was merely playing some adroit political game, seeking to get back into power in England. They will not accept his disclaimer that all his ambitions already have been "satisfied beyond my wildest dreams."

It is doubtful, however, that Churchill was playing any such game.

He knows, of course, that he is bluntly demanding that England step down from the high position expressed in the phrase, "Britannia Rules the Waves," and become junior partner in a fusion in which Uncle Sam would dominate. And he knows, too, that to a host of fellow Britons such a proposal will come as first cousin to an insult.

Far from elevating him in the hearts of his countrymen, the speech may forever eliminate him from the possibility of resuming British leadership—even if his suggestions were to be carried out!

And Churchill, too, has been far too long in politics, and is too adroit in his workings, not to realize that this is probably the last time President Truman will be so rash as to venture on the same public platform with Churchill.

President Truman has been put on the toughest spot of his political life by the wily Britisher.

Is he for or against merging with Great Britain; is he for or against Russia? These are questions he will find exceedingly hard to answer, yet Churchill's speech, under such auspices, demands that he answer them.

The address was a bombshell for all the foreign and much of the domestic policy to which Truman has committed himself.

FOR INSTANCE, three corrective proposals appear indefinitely hung up in Senate committees. The Case bill, which is not drastic and not really comprehensive, but none the less in the right direction, was overwhelmingly passed by the House. It is now held in the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

AND NOW, after a long period of inaction, it is announced that the Education and Labor Committee has appointed a sub-committee not to consider pending bills but to draft an altogether new bill. Even if the new bill should be an effective piece of legislation, it could not be drafted, debated and enacted inside of 60 days, much less the 30 given us by Mr. Lewis. But no one thinks the sub-committee will produce an effective bill, for the simple reason that it is packed with CIO Senators opposed to any legislation not favored by the CIO lobby.

THIS is an indefensible state of affairs. Yet, because of the inability to get the masses of the people sufficiently informed to become effectively indignant, nothing can be done about it and the country moves steadily closer to what seems to be economic chaos. How long the tolerance and inertia of the masses will permit the political adherents in public office of a single labor faction to imperil their happiness and prosperity is a question—maybe, indefinitely. At any rate, it is a situation that ought to make us ashamed to preach order, competency and economy to other nations and to press upon them the adoption of a system which we cannot make work ourselves. But we are doing both those things.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Sulphate of ammonia, 521,972,255 pounds of which were produced in Pennsylvania in 1944, is used in most high nitrogen mixed fertilizers.

Produced as a gas when coke is made from coal for the vast steel industries of Pennsylvania, ammonia is treated with dilute sulphuric acid to form crystals of sulphate of ammonia. The dry, clean, free-running crystals are easy to handle in the fertilizer factory and easy to apply on the farm. Pennsylvania produces approximately one-third of the total coke-oven sulphate of ammonia manufactured in the United States.

This chemical by-product contains 20.6 per cent nitrogen, the growth element so essential for plants and the trees. It is applied to the soil both alone and in mixed fertilizers. It is noted for its free-running quality and its resistance to leaching. When added to mixed fertilizers, sulphate of ammonia improves the physical condition of the mixture.

Nitrogen, which today is being proved through widely placed experiments as one of the essentials of high production and of soil conservation, was stored away in prehistoric times. When plants died and were buried through erosion and upheaval, their nitrogen was preserved in the coal which they formed. The modern coke oven does not allow this ammonia to escape in smoke as the beehive ovens did.

Tests have proved that sulphate of ammonia is immediately available to plants and that it gives high increases both in yield and quality. As top-dressing for winter grains and pasture, sulphate of ammonia fertilizers have proved successful economically and agronomically. They have also proved valuable to orchards and vineyards.

Pennsylvania farmers, with high sulphate of ammonia production in "their own backyard," have a particularly rich resource which as yet they have begun merely to tap. If used in a balanced fertilizer, Pennsylvania's output of coke-oven ammonia would produce nearly 200 million bushels of corn or 313 million bushels of wheat.

Two league and an independent game will be played on the Mutual Aid floor tonight as the Bristol Youth League concludes its regular season. The first game will get under way at seven o'clock sharp.

In the opener, the Celtics will play the Third Ward Eagles. The second contest pits Franklin against Edgely while in the third game, St. Ann's A. A. meets Olney A. A.

The Celtics have a chance to finish in fourth place with a win tonight. The Ramblers and Catholic Boys Club suffered defeats last Monday night and a triumph for the Celtics will place them in the play-offs. A defeat for Vito Della's boys means a three-way tie for the final playoff position and a playoff will be necessary to decide fourth place.

Strengthened by the acquisition of Al Burton and "Easy" Mama, two former Bristol High players, the Celtics have a fine opportunity of beating the Eagles who have third place clinched. Along with Manera, Basil, and Dick Harmon, the two high school players will give the Celtics plenty of scoring power.

The Eagles still have their standing line-up, not having acquired any additional players since the start of the season. They are led by "Johnny" Rodgers who stands third in the league's scorers with 175 points for the season. The Celtics have vowed to guard Rodgers closely tonight to assure themselves of a triumph.

The Franklin team is favored over the Edgely boys. Franklin lost possession of first place to the Harriman quintet and must win tonight to finish in a deadlock. As the winner of the regular season championship will be awarded a trophy, the Franklin club will extend all it has to beat the Edgelyites and will use Feole, Centonze and Fields, of the high school team. Edgely has acquired Bintliffe, who played with Falls Township High School.

The independent match between St. Ann's and Olney should prove very interesting. Last week in Philadelphia, Olney scored a 40-34 victory over the "Saints." The visitors average six feet in height and have a season's record of 23 victories and four defeats. Four college boys are members of the Olney starting line-up.

Managers "Pete" Bornice and Ray Pico, of St. Ann's, will have in its starting line-up: "Chick" Ciabella, Bert Barberta, Fred Barberta, "Rabbit" Palumbo, and "Sugar" Salustio.

SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

100 WORDS per dip! That's what they say about the wonderful "Swivodex" desk pen! This pen is truly remarkable, and costs but $3. It comes complete with desk stand. A sealed-in feature keeps ink from spilling or evaporating. The point is made to last. The desk container reveals to any angle. A "Swivodex" is a grand and reliable pen for gifting or for using on home or office desks. Nice for the children to give their dads! Snellenburg Stationery Dept. (1st floor.)

BEGIN EARLY to prepare for moth invasion. Toward spring, the enemy sends out the first troops. The Snellenburg Housefurnishings Dept. already has splendid blanket-bags of heavy green or red paper, similar to coat and dress bags, at but 39c each. Let me remind you, too, of that excellent moth spray—"Sla"—which this store features at 1 pt., 85c; 1 qt., $1.35; 1/2 gal., $2.55; 1 gal., $4.25. Sprayers, 59c each. (3rd fl.)

CHURCH OR PARTY sets for little girls two to six years are darling. Mysterified? So was I, until I was shown the sweet little pouch handbags of white pigtex capeskin accompanied by one-clasp white cotton gloves, just like mother's, and fashioned of double-woven cotton. These pretty sets may be bought for wear now or kept for Easter. Price complete (bag tax included) is $3.20. Come on, grandmothers, what about gifting your small honeys? Order from a distance or drop into the Children's Glove Dept. of the Snellenburg Store (1st fl.)

LETTERS FROM MEN tell me how convenient and satisfactory is the Men's Furnishings Dept. of the Snellenburg Store. The location means much to busy males, for it's just a case of pop in at the store's 12th and Market Sts. door and into the Department at the same time! This Men's Furnishings Dept. is famous for many particular staple items, but just now let me tell you and your payer men about hand-painted ties at the remarkably low price of $1 each! All sorts of designs, including sports, florals, etc. Also, a few steps away there are some special sleeveless sweaters, 100% wool, at only $3.95 each. They are to be had in a nice choice of blue, tan, green, luggage, camel, etc., and they come in small, medium and large sizes. (1st fl.)

P.S. Do send clippings with mail orders when you can! Phone free (5c, 10c, and 15c out-of-town calls only). Penna.—ENT. 10160; Jersey—WX-1150. Shop located Market, 11th to 12th Sts., Phila.—through to 1125-29 Chestnut St. Be hearin' from you! Faithful, FAITH.
